WHEN SHOULD YOU OR A LOVED ONE SEEK THERAPY?

When you or a loved one is experiencing stress, depression, or anxiety that interferes with your or with his/her ability to perform daily activities...consider therapy.

If you are having difficulty making decisions, getting out of bed, interacting with family members or friends, or if you are experiencing a loss of appetite, or loss of sleep...
consider therapy.

If you are injuring yourself, are addicted to food or substances... therapy would be helpful.

If you are considering or have hurt or mutilated yourself... therapy is essential! If you have attempted suicide or are thinking about it...
therapy is essential!

Call your doctor, one of the agencies or private practitioners listed in this brochure for an appointment.

If this is an emergency, call 911 or the Mental Health Hotline at Misunderstanding — Outside pressures

Unfortunately, the media is responsible for many of the misconceptions which persist about mental illness.

Comedians make fun of those with mental illnesses.

What have you done to lessen the stigma?

What will you do in the future to promote understanding and acceptance?
